Take-Off

In this, our last accomplishment as high school students, we hope to keep alive the memories of those days beneath the Orange and the Black. It is difficult for us, who are leaving, to conceal the sentiments of sorrow and regret imbedded deep in our hearts.

Since the development of aviation will have such an important bearing upon the future transportation of the world and will, therefore, exert tremendous influence upon our lives and future accomplishments, we believe our theme to be in keeping with the trend of the day, and indicative of the modern world in which we shall soon take our places.

From "prop" to "flippers" we hope you will enjoy our flight in fancy.

It is with just pride that we dedicate this book to our teacher and friend, Mary E. Axby. She has been close to us through our high school days and our memories of hours spent with her will grow dearer with age.

'The year's at the spring And day's at the morn. Morning's at seven The hillside's dew-pearl'd: The lark's on the wing; The snail's on the thorn: God's in His heaven—All's right with the world!"

SALLY E. RITZMANN Editor-in-chief

Won't you see what we have done?

Although my hair is growing gray,

It has been lots of fun.

VIOLA ROEHRIG-Associate

Greetings, too, my worthy friends; We hope you like this journal; I've typed and typed with all my might To make our book eternal.

CLARA WIRTH Assistant

Sleepless nights have been my lot, Since this work was started; But now we give it all to you, And so we leave, glad-hearted.

CHARLES MILLER Assistant

I'm the man on this here staff, And when they want advice, If I shout, "No, no! No, no!" They never ask me twice. JAMES McMANAMAN Business Manager Business, business! What a life!

Who'll take an ad from me?
"Twill be quite worth the money spent,
Just try it, then, and see!

MARJORIE DIEHL
Associate

"Come on, kuls, let's subscribe today."
That's how she sold these books
Her record's very hard to beat;
Now, could it be her looks?

JUNE WOOD
Assistant

I'm not as tall as others are, But then I don't need height For when I say, "Oh, pretty please," The big dogs lose their bits

Senior Log

In nineteen hundred and thirty-one, The Freshmen fell right in; They sang so loud that Seniors great Complained of such a din.

But Freshmen boys did very well In basketball and track; Frosh girls won all the tourneys; You see, they weren't so slack!

The honor roll their names enhanced; They gave a scrumptious ball; Then their first year ended, So they stayed away 'til fall

As Sophomores smart, they held their own In math and history, too; They studied hard to make their grades; They helped the Tiger crew.

The tourney crown remained with them, Their girls won out again; Their party, too, brought great delight; Then to school they said, "Amen!"

That Junior year! Oh, dear! Oh, dear! With floats, class plays, bake sales, They worked and worked from morn 'til night For "honest effort never fails."

When tourney time rolled 'round once more,
The girls upheld their name;
The promenade was quite the thing,
And brought them lasting fame.

Since they're Seniors, tried and true, They've finally reached the top; They'd like to stick around awhile Before life's plane they hop.

The paper and the class play, too.
Were good, indeed, you bet!
The tourney victory came their way.
Their program is remembered yet.

Their plane is waiting on the field.
They're ready for the flight;
May good tail winds attend their way!
"Happy landings! Visions bright!"

Junior Class History

Fighting on with a spirit not to be downed, the class of '36 completed the third year of their high school career with flying colors

The Junior class, while having the least enrollment of the entire high school, entered into their tasks with determination, and, with the splendid cooperation of the faculty, easily overshadowed the lack in numbers.

Their success was not restricted to the classroom. The basketball floor diamond, and track were characterized by highling Junior combinations.

Another prominent achievement in a different way was the Junior class play, "Tiger House," directed by Miss Axby, our able and efficient sponsor. This modern play by Robert St. Clar proved to be entirely different from the junior class selections of previous years being one which will always be proudly remembered by the class as both an artistic and economic success.

The crowning social event of the year, the Junior-Senior banquet, was made possible by the never ceasing efforts of the Junior class behind wisely selected leaders.

With three years of good work behind them the class members look forward to a grand finish as Seniors.

Sophomore Class History

Remember us? Although since Freshmen days, our numbers have fallen from eighty-two to forty nine, those of us who remain are not sorry because we have had many and varied experiences in this, our Sophomore year.

Through personal effort we have learned to value the honor roll students and we have learned to feel ourselves a part of this institution.

Our class has tried to lend a helping hand to all L. H. S. organizations. Sophomore boys were listed on the basketball, track, and baseball teams. While the girls have responded to volley-ball, tumbling and G. A. A. activities, at the same time their work in the Glee Club and Chorus has been of no little consequence.

To climax our second year in dear L. H. S., we staged a great party in the gymnasium. Let those who attended vouch for its success!

Freshman Class History

Hear yel Hear ye! I am about to give a history of this year's Freshman class. If ye be interested, listen well!

It was a jolly group of laughing, talking boys and girls who entered Lawrenceburg High School in September of 1934, to be this year's Freshman class. These Freshies have helped to make this past year at Lawrenceburg High a good one.

Our class has been well represented in basketball, track, and baseball. Although we were defeated in the Interclass Tourney by the Sophomores, we intend to get our revenge next year, and beat the 'will be' Juniors. The girls, after defeating the Juniors, were defeated by the Seniors in the Volley Ball Tourney. We have plenty of good material, nevertheless, and intend to win next year.

Our first class meeting was a spicy affair, in which everyone made known what was on their minds concerning the method by which the class should be run. After much bickering our class officers were elected. An orchid to Rita Lemm, our efficient Freshman Reporter! In every issue of the L. Hi News there has been an accurate account of the doings of the Freshman class, written quite well by Rita.

This Freshman class is destined to do great things; just watch us soar to new heights in basketball, track and baseball in our next three years at L. H. S.

ACTIVITIES

L. High News Staff

The school paper was resumed this year under the able editorship and management of Cathryn Seitz and Gerald Ewbank. With a crew of willing workers behind them, they published a semi monthly L. Hi News. The variety and value of the articles, which appeared throughout the year, have made for a more closely united student body. It has truly been representative of our school life.

Senior Class Play

"I'LL LEAVE IT TO YOU"

"I'll Leave It To You," is a clever and amusing three act comedy. Left a widow with a paltry sum of $7500 a year to support herself and her five children, Mrs. Dermott turns to brother Dan for help, convinced that he is rich, because he is a bachelor and mine owner in South America. Uncle Dan arrives to find an idle family ready to live on his money. He announces that he has been doomed to die in three years and that he intends to leave all his money to the member of the family who has made good in that time. Oliver becomes a successful inventor. Evangeline, a novelist, Bobbie, a song composer, Sylvia a film star, and Joyce, finishing her school career, distinguishes herself in art. Uncle Dan's plans come to an end when he announces that his supposed riches were a myth and that his previous ious announcement was just a method to raise the family from the lethargy in which it had grown up. Sylvia alone sees the wisdom of what Uncle Dan has done and rates the others for their narrow minded attitudes.

"TIGER HOUSE"

Erma Lowrie, a capable and appealing young girl, has inherited from her eccentric aunt an isolated country estate which, because of its alleged hauntings, is known as "Mystery Manor." According to the terms of the will, Erma must occupy this house for one year.

The action takes place in the library of "Mystery Manor" where Erma is warned by the mystery woman to leave the house. The strange actions of the Hindu houseboy, Yami, add to the tenseness created by flashing lightning, thunder, secret passage-ways, and screams in the dark.

Arthur Hale and Oswald Kerins, cousins of Erma, and her Aunt Sophia offer assistance; but it is MacIntosh, Erma's sweetheart, who finally solves the thrilling mystery and brings the play to a happy ending.

The Orchestra

No one knows better than the fifteen orchestra members that the price of success is work. Our weekly practices under the direction of Miss Cain, whose passion for accuracy and purity of tone are well known, have been quite enjoyable, yet we did practice! "One, two, three, ritard," how we did practice!

After the reheards of the fall months, our first reward was felt in the fine response of the student body to our playing for the Christ mas program on December 23. Miss Cain, too, was pleased.

Our efforts found further recognition at the later functions of the school year, which included the exhibit program of the Parent Teacher Association, the Junior class play, the Senior class play, and the best of all, the sixtieth Commencement of old L. H. S. For the first time in her history, the high school orchestra provided the instrumental numbers and accompanied the high school chorus. We held our distinction proudly.

In May, the Kiwanis Club extended hospitality when we played at one of their Tuesday luncheons.

A grand year is past. We continue to strive for the best

Glee Club And Chorus History

Knowing the high standards of the glee clubs of past years, we started work this year feeling that we must maintain those standards, or, if possible, exceed them. We hope that we have attained our goal. If we have, it is due entirely to the willingness and ability of Miss Cain who has done her utmost to make the Lawrenceburg high school glee club and chorus one of the best ever presented.

After diligent rehearsal during the fall months, Miss Cain preented the girls' group in public appearance, successively, before the Greendale Parent-Teacher Association, the Lawrenceburg Parent Teacher Association, the Zion Evangebeal Ladies Aid Society, and the student body of Lawrenceburg High School. On these occasions, our repertoire included "May Dance," "In His Little Cradle," "Murmuring Zephyrs", and "It Was a Dream."

These feminine voices with the help of the deeper tones of some one dozen of our boys have composed the chorus, an innovation in the music department. The chorus has, twice during the year, appeared before the public, singing, "Chief of the Arab Band" and "Beyond the Spanish Main."

This year, in lieu of either cantata or operetta, our glee club and chorus have been asked to add variety to the commencement program by presenting a group of songs and special numbers with the orchestra.

Girls' Athletic Association

The G. A. A. began the year 1934-35 with plans for a season more replete with activities than ever before.

There were many freshmen anxious to become eligible for membership by fulfilling such requirements as earning twenty five points in hiking. In order to help prospective members gain their eligibility points, our instructor, Miss Baughman, planned a breakfast hike Early one bright morning we met at the Newtown Park and swung merrily along. We soon reached a secluded spot where we prepared our breakfast and had a beautiful view of the city. We gloried in the wonders of nature but had to stop day-dreaming for more serious things awaited us. On the return no time was lost for we were full of pep and ready to begin the day. We enjoyed many more such trips and, before long, the names were presented for membership.

This called for initiation. So, at our unforgettable party in the gym, the upper classmen assumed responsibility for the freshmen.

During the winter season, we held weekly meetings at the gym when we played basketball and volley ball. Every class worked diligently to win the volley-ball tourney but the seniors added the fourth tournament victory to their honors.

In keeping with the joyous spirit of the Yuletide season, the members sponsored a second party at the gym. Entertainment and refreshment committees planned well, for clever stunts and tasty food enlivened the evening. Too, our hearts were warmed by sharing with others, for the foodstuffs brought by our girls for the needy filled three baskets.

Spring soon arrived and we began taking part in outdoor activities such as soft ball and anxiously awaited our tourney. When it really came, each class proved better than expected, and the victors worked hard for the cup.

In May, we held the second G. A. A. track meet in the history of the school. All of the girls participated in one or more activities, the better ones triumphantly carrying home blue ribbons.

We enjoy the G. A. A. for we realize that through its training we develop clean, healthful bodies and a sense of fair play.

Camera Club

Since photography is an essential tool for the astronomer, physician, surgeon, and dentist, a general knowledge of the scientific principles involved has become necessary to the well educated youth of today.

About the middle of January, a new room was added to the chemistry and physics department, which soon became known as the "dark room." Some of the larger high schools of the state maintain photography departments in connection with the chemistry and physics work, but it is not usual in small schools. Mr. Harrison thought, however, that a photographic dark room would be valuable here, to enable students to better understand the transmission of light.

The dark room, which was formerly used as a "store all" for the janitor, is located beneath the stairs which lead to the basement of the high school. Several industrious boys have made it suitable for photographic work by cleaning, plastering, and painting the interior

After this preliminary conditioning, the dark room was ready. A group of the boys interested in the project of photography, thought they would like to go deeper into this line of work than they could expect to go in the chemistry and physics classes. This led to the organization of the Camera Club of L. H. S. whose charter members were. James McMananian, Francis Wessel, Norman Armstrong, Louis Griffith, and Robert Lemm. At the first meeting of the club, the election of officers was held. As the club progressed the following boys were admitted: Gerald Ewbank, Leo Noppert, Charles Ohler, John Norris, and Robert Bessler.

Expenses of developing and printing are borne by the entire Camera Club which has been sufficiently interested to buy one of the newest type folding cameras. Louis Griffith, the club's handy man, has made printing frames and other equipment to permit enlargement of original negatives.

ATHLETICS

COACH NEWGENT

Mr. Harold H. Newgent, director of athletics in Lawrenceburg High School, has been with us for ten successive years. He has made a name among other schools not only for himself and his teams but also for L. H. S. We are proud to have "Newg" as our coach and we hope he will guide the Tigers to many more victories.

TIGERS

The first ten men were Hafenbritle, Clark, Bihr, D. Schoeff, G. Schoeff, Gardner, Armstrong, Bessler, and McKain Four of these are Seniors and their shoes will be hard to fill in the coming year. However, the six remaining, with several promising players from the second team, will make a very strong team.

ARMSTRONG (Junior)

"Army" plays with skill every position on the team. He did not get to play much this year, but when sent into the game, he always fought hard and gave a good account of himself. He will be back again next year.

BESSLER (Senior)

"Bess" has a real eye for the basket. He is noted for his ability to score from long range. He is a boy who can be depended upon when sent into a game. As he is a Senior, he leaves another place to fill in the Tiger machine.

BIHR (Senior)

This is "Iron Horse Bill's" second and final year on the varsity. He is noted for his ability to withstand the bumps and for his side scoring. Too bad that he's a Senior!

CLARK (Sophomore)

"Wild Bill" is a very fast shifting forward and is always found in the thickest part of the game. He's improving every day, and we shall count very much upon him next year.

GARDNER (Junior)

"Mush" has rounded out his second year on the varsity. He has speed and fight and is also a very accurate shot. He has one more year to trot the hardwood.

HAFENBRITLE (Senior)

Bill has played his fourth and final year on the varsity. His ability as a pivot man was known throughout the state. "Moose" has the pep that is needed to make a ball player. His shoes will be hard to fill.

KEMPER (Senior)

Kemper played in most of the games during the season. He has a real eye for the basket and has the ability that it takes to make a Tiger. He is a member of the class of '35.

McKAIN (Junior)

"Mack" has been on the varsity for only a short time. Along with an accurate shot he has lots of speed. McKain should burn up the hardwood next year.

NEARY (Senior)

Roy is fast and a very dependable ball player. He is always on his toes and giving his very best. He developed a side line shot that was very hard to stop. We'll miss him next year

D. SCHOEFF (Junior)

This is Dale's initial year on the varsity. He is a steady and alert guard and also a good shot. As he is a Junior, he has one more year to fight under the Orange and Black.

G. SCHOEFF (Sophomore)

Gail also plays every position on the team. He is a sure shot and is a cool and sportsmanlike player. He is only a sophomore.

GILLUM AND MILLER (Student Managers)

Ray and Charlie have taken good care of the athletic equipment throughout the season and have faithfully tended to their many dut ies. As both boys are Seniors, they have "thrown in the towel" for the last time.

Second Team

The L. H. S. second team of 1934-35 was composed of capable players, the majority of whom were underclassmen. Their seas on's record was 11 games won and 7 games lost. They boast victories over such teams as Aurora, North Vernon, Brookville, Rising Sun, and Milroy.

TEAM WORK

"It's all very well to have courage and skill
And it's fine to be counted a star,
But the single deed with its touch of thrill
Doesn't tell us the man you are;
For there's no lone hand in the game we play,
We must work to a bigger scheme,
And the thing that counts in the world today
ls, How do you pull with the team?"

Baseball Team

Many promising players reported when the call was made for baseball practice. Among them were Gillum, D. Schoeff, G. Schoeff, Gardner, Neary, Kemper, McManaman, Tibbetts, Ryle, Wunker, Turner, McKain, Bessler, Armstrong, and Tucker.

The Tigers have a strong battery with Kemper catching, and Gillum and G. Schoeff sharing the mound duties.

Gillum was the only veteran left from the baseball team of '32.

The Tigers opened the season by trouncing Guilford 9-1.

LITERATURE

Conquest Of The Air

Who were the first men to fly? Were they Americans? What kind of a plane did they have? Daedalus and his son learns were the first men to fly. No, they weren't Americans. They were Greeks. I hey had no plane but wings fashioned out of some feathers and wax. The story of Daedalus and Icarus is purely mythical, of course. Still it shows us that men were thinking about the possibilities of flying many centuries ago.

When King Minos of Greece imprisoned father and son in the labyrinth which Daedalus had built, Daedalus constructed those wings for him and his son. They flew over the prison walls and out across the Mediterranean. Daedalus understood the danger so he flew low and landed sately in Sicily. But Icarus wanted to get close to heaven. He came too near the sun, the wax in his wings melted and he fell into the water, which was thereupon called the Icarian Sea.

Most men of old liked to work out flying plans and let others experiment. One of this class was Archimedes, the great Greek mathematician, born in 287 B. C. Some of his ideas are so up-to-date that they were published in 1897.

In 1250 Roger Bacon, famous English scientist and publicist, thought that by setting artificial wings to beating, man could lift himself off the earth. Obviously he couldn't see the practical obstacles facing him. But another idea of his was more advanced. He considered that heated air might be used to raise man from the ground Although he had studied the possibilities of flying machines, Bacon wasn't so eager to do any actual experimenting.

Even Leonardo da Vinci was air-minded. In the latter part of the fifteenth century he drew plans for a machine that he called an ornithopter. He thought that it would be able to sustain itself by flapping its wings like a bird. Vinci did not go beyond the drawings, but Fauste Veranzio did.

Veranzio lived in Venice. He was probably the first man ever to actually fly. One day in 1617 with a box-like frame-work covered with canvas attached to his body, he jumped from a lofty tower, sailed to earth, and—lived.

After these experiments came the names of the Jesuit Francisco Lana, the German, Karl Meerwin, the Montgolfier brothers, De Rozier and d'Arlandes (theirs was the first unattached balloon flight in which a human being participated, November 21, 1783) Professor Bergson of Germany, who once held the altitude record for balloons with 6.7 miles, and Captain H. C. Gray of the U. S. Air Service, the next record breaker. All of these men were influential in the development of aircraft.

Following the feats of Henri Giffard, a French inventor, and others, Hugo Von Eckener and a German crew circled the world in the record-breaking time of 19 days, 7 hours, and 7 minutes elapsed time. A former San Francisco newspaper man, then representing a group of United States newspapers in Berlin, conceived the plan so he was among the nineteen passengers and the crew of forty who made the trip. The fare was $9,000.

The success of dirigible balloons encouraged scientists the world over to begin anew their attempts to perfect a passenger-carrying, heavier-than-air machine. However incredulous it may seem, the kite had been a very important factor in establishing the principles of aviation. It had proved that a wing will rise when a breeze strikes it at an angle, and also that curving a wing slightly so that it will catch the breeze adds to the lifting power. But still men hadn't dis covered a way to create a breeze and make the winged weight move forward; an American, Francis Hopkinson, suggested the propeller idea to Benjamin Franklin, and in 1820, the American Rufus Porter invented a screw propeller turned by a steam engine. The final problem, establishing balance, was solved by the Wrights in 1903.

To many people, flying is a precarious game. In order to help them understand its principles, they must know what makes an airplane fly: when the engine (which is on the order of an automobile engine) starts, the propeller begins to turn exactly as a fan on an automobile. The edge of the propeller blade is like the edge of an augur bit, being similarly shaped, and it projects into the air, a liquid, just as an augur bores through wood. As the propeller whirls it creates a breeze which catches the curved wings of the plane and raises them and their load. So you see, the action of the propeller both lifts and carries the plane. To descend or turn the plane, the tail or wing rudders are raised and lowered.

The detailed aeronautical researches of the Australian, Lawrence Hargrave, have been proclaimed "the starting point for modern researches on the subject in Europe and Asia,"

Sir Hiram Maxim, an American who became a naturalized Englishman because he thought that Uncle Sam had treated him badly in respect to some of his inventions, gave much to early aeronautical advancement. He built a heavier-than-air machine in 1894 but he couldn't get it off the ground. After living in England awhile, he grew impatient with the slowness of the British government to encourage aviation. He predicted that England would someday suffer aerial raids and he lived to actually see during the World War what he had forefold.

After Alexander Bell, the inventor of the telephone's manlifting kites, came the modern airplane. Because the United States government was slow to see the ultimate value of flying, a little money was brought forward for further experimentation. In the "nineties" one brave Representative the late "Uncle Joe" Cannon, squeezed a $5,000 aeronautical appropriation through Congress. A great part of the money was used to fly a machine built by Samuel P. Langley, once at the head of the Smithsonian Institution. He had spent all of his own money to perfect his "aerodrome," a huge kite-like affair which had flown without a passenger. When he searched for a financial promoter, he was unsuccessful. In 1906 he died brokenhearted.

In 1878 when Reverend Milton Wright, a New Englander who had moved to Indiana (where Wilbur was born), gave his sons a toy flying machine, the boys became interested in aviation. They studied planned, and experimented intermittently from that time until 1900. By this year they had completed their first glider. The Wrights had to have a good wind behind their ship so the Weather Bureau directed them to Kitty Hawk, New Jersey. The brothers took turns at guiding the glider from the top of a sand dune to the land below. Bilt Tate, a local lifeguard there, helped to hold the machine in check by a rope. It is interesting to know that after the glider cracked up. Tate ripped off the white sateen wing covering and made dresses for his two little girls. Both girls later married aviators. Quite a coincidence! The years 1902 and 1903 found the Wrights back at Kitty Hawk with an improved machine. After more than a thousand flights they thought the time had come for a motor-driven glider.

Returning to Dayton, they set to work to build such a machine. From September 23 until December 14 of 1903, mistorium delayed their trials. But on that December 14 Wilbur flew the machine a few feet and then it landed with several broken parts. On December 17 Orville took it up—he was successful. Four flights were made that day. The longest time in the air was 59 seconds and the average speed was 31 miles per hour.

At Kitty Hawk in May of 1908, Orville and a mechanic made the first two-passenger flight in history. In the same year Wilbur, disappointed because France was using the Wrights designs and questioning the boys' flights, went to France. The only way that he could get a plane contract from the French government was to overcome such competitors as Bleriot, Farman, Delagrange (in 1908 he flew with the first woman-passenger Alme Therese Peltier), Ader, San tos-Dumont, and Archdeacon. Undaunted he smashed all distance flight records by covering 60.85 miles in an hour and thirty one min utes. France went mad over him. And soon after he stayed up with a passenger for an hour and ten minutes. Immediately the French government gave him a contract. He sent some money to Orville and their sister Natherine, both of whom joined him in Paris Europe feted the brothers, contracted them, and crowned them as kings of the air President Tatt received them at the White House They were awarded a gold medal and $5000 by the New York Aero Club In 1912 Wilbur died suddenly Crville, in his seventies, lives quietly in Dayton, Ohio.

From 1908 until 1914 flying crazed the world. Great money prizes were offered and won for daring and distance flights. In 1911 Harriet Quinby, the first woman flyer was licensed in Boston.

War came. In April of 1917, France requested five thousand American aviators to be sent over for the first year. Many who knew the conditions of our air forces were amused at this. But before the Armistice, more than 5,000 men were supplied and 200,000 more were in training.

Of course such progress was made during the War that the world became quite air-conscious. In 1919 the first aerial crossing of the Atlantic by Commander A. C. Read and a crew of five and the first non-stop flight of Lieutenant A W Brown of the United States and Captain J Alcock of Great Britain did much to enhance public interest. By 1922 four hundred planes were privately owned here. In 1924 two Army Air Service planes circled the globe. Their success brought forth congratulations from President Coolidge, King George and other heads.

Then Commander Byrd flew over the North Pole. By 1927 two thousand planes were privately owned in the United States Mail, passenger, and express planes became important factors in transportation.

Like a bolt from the blue came Charles A. Lindbergh, twenty-five year old son of a former Congressman. St. Louis business men backed him up, he planned his own plane, and headed eastward from Roosevelt Field, New York, at 7:52 A. M. of May 20, 1927, equipped with four sandwiches and a bottle of water. The world waited in suspense. Thirty-three hours and twenty-nine minutes later he landed at Le Bourget Field outside of Paris.

Throughout 1927 many hazardous flights were attempted. Some daring flyers were successful. Others cracked up. On June 17-18, 1928, Amelia Earhart flew across the Atlantic with Stultz and Gordon. She was the first woman to make this flight.

In 1929 Commander Byrd, Bernt Balchen, and Captain Ashley McKinley flew across the South Pole.

Mr. and Mrs. Lindbergh broke Frank Hawks' cross-country record by flying from Los Angeles to New York on April 30, 1930, in fourteen hours, twenty three minutes and forty five seconds. Amy Johnson, tired of humdrum office existence, saved her pennies, and flew from Croydon, England, to Australia, setting another record

Post and Gatty girdled the globe in 1931 with a new record of eight days, fifteen hours, and fifty-one minutes.

Five years later, on the same days of the month in which Lindbergh had solved the Atlantic, Amelia Earhart thrilled the world by flying the same route (May 20-21, 1932).

Captain Mallison made the first east-west transatlantic solo flight in history and another Britisher. Amy Johnson, again came forth, this time with a new record between Lympne, England, and Cape Town, Africa.

Jimmy Doolittle set a new speed record in 1932 of 296.287 miles per hour for land planes.

Since 1932 new records have been established and new skies conquered. The success of General Balbo and his Italian Armada, composed of twenty four planes and nearly a hundred men, demonstrates the value of careful planning (two years in this case), the possibility of greater safety and dependability in flights of planes in groups in constant touch with each other and with stations on shore. The project excites by its very magnitude.

Lone Wolf Jimmy Mattern's solo flight better than half-way round the world in '33 is an example of the type of aviation used to focus attention on flying and its possibilities but now it seems unnecessarily wasteful and hazardous.

Major James H Doolittle and the late James Wedell made the Washington Mexico City hop non-stop in 1931 and 1932 respectively. On May 9, 1935, Amelia Earhart Putnam made the first non-stop flight from Mexico City to New York in 14 hours, 22 minutes, and 50 seconds.

The world's speed record belongs to Francesco Agello of Italy, who made 423 822 miles per hour in a Macchi Castoldi seaplane on April 10, 1933. The American record went to Lieutenant James Doolittle, U. S. A. S., whose speed was 395.439 miles per hour. Miss harhart Putnam holds the women's International distance record and Marquise Carina Cambiaso created a new seaplane altitude record for women on May 7, 1934, by reaching a height of 18,222 feet

At this time our government is attempting to perfect a gyroplane, a combination auto and airplane which will sell under $1000. Commercial airlines now girdle the globe. International records are being broken and reset every day. The world has accepted aviation as a vital part of our modern civilization and a potent factor in the future life of the nations.

Kindness Pays

It was the last day of July and one of those sultry days when pedestrians looked tired and withered as they trudged homeward over the hot sidewalks. The tar was bubbling in the streets and small dirty children were playing in the gutters, making tar balls out of the oozy mass. Odors of stale coffee, sausages, and fried potatoes were coming from the windws of the dark, dingy tenement houses and greasy fat women were gossiping out of their windows. Some of the high-pitched voices were in the Italian language, others in broken tongues.

This was the scene that met Sylvia's gaze as she came home to her hot, stuffy room after searching all day for some kind of employment. All her efforts, so far, had proved fruitless and she was thoroughly disgusted with the world. Yet she fett perseverance would surely be rewarded, and never gave up hope.

Sylvia was an orphan who, although reared in the home of her wealthy aunt, had not enjoyed a happy life. Her kindly disposed aunt meant well, but Sylvia had missed the love of her dear mother who had been snatched from her so early in life. Her older cousins made life miserable for her and she was glad that she had run away. At least, she now could do what she pleased. She was free and of age Her cousins had always been jealous of her youthful beauty and had kept her out of all their social activities, and. "I suppose they are glad that I am gone," she thought.

Sylvia had saved money which she thought would suffice until she had secured employment. But employment was harder to find than she had anticipated. Her little savings were now about gone and she was losing her courage as the sun slowly sank from sight. She wondered what would happen if she did not soon find work. All at once she heard the pitiful crying of a small dog and, in a near by passage, found a pathetic looking bundle of tangled hair and thorns. Sylvia had always had a warm spot in her heart for stray dogs and she was happy now in the friendship of this homeless creature. They felt drawn together by loneliness and need. Little did Sylvia guess what a vital part in her life this dog was destined to play.

She took the whimpering creature to the cellar, and, upon finding a wire brush, proceeded to untangle the hair, remove the thorns, and give the dog a bath. When she had dried the dog with one of her dresses, she was surprised to see a beautiful long-haired, silky water spaniel.

Three years later, we find Sylvia in a beautiful country home with fragrant flowers, cool green grass, and a number of dogs running over the lawn.

The events leading up to her altered environment were directly due to the kindness she had shown to this poor dog on one hot July night.

Later, she had seen an item in the paper offering a handsome reward for the return of a dog which answered to its description.

She at once took the dog to the address in the paper and found that it belonged to the children of Mr. Landis, a prominent New York broker. He was impressed by her honesty, kindness, sweet disposition, her willingness to work and her beauty. And in recognition of these fine qualities he added to the reward a temporary position as nurse and governess for his two small children who had been left motherless a few months before. The children were so enthused over their lost dog's return and so grateful to the finder that these four soon became inseparable comrades. Their tather, seeing that Sylvia was proving herself to be a very capable supervisor for the children made the offer permanent. For two years she continued to care for these children, who with the passing of the days, became very dear to her.

Since Sylvia, herself, had been reared in the refined family of her aunt and had obtained a good education, she was very capable of training and properly influencing her small charges. She was loved by the two children and, as time went on, was loved by their father, who considered her so indispensable to the family a happiness that he asked her to become Mrs. Landis.

Sylvia truly felt herself to be one of the most fortunate girls in the world and cherished throughout its life, the little spaniel which had led her to her new life of happiness.

THE GAME

LET'S play it out—this little game called Life.
Where we are listed for so brief a spell:

Not just to win, amid the tumult rife,

Or where acclaim and gay applauses swell;

Not just to conquer where some one must lose,

Or reach the goal whatever be the cost; For there are other, better ways to choose,

Though in the end the battle may be lost.

Let's play it out as if it were a sport,

Wherein the game is better than the goal,

And never mind the detailed "score's" report
Of errors made, if each with dauntless soul

But stick it out until the day is done,

Not wasting fairness for success or fame,

So when the battle has been lost or won,

The world at least can say: "He played the game."

Let's play it out—this little game called Work,

Or War or Love or what part each may draw;

Play like a man who scorns to quit or shirk.

Because the break may carry some deep flaw;

Nor simply holding that the goal is all.

That keeps the player in the contest staying;

But stick it out from curtain rise to fall.

As if the game itself were worth the playing.

-Grantland Rice.

A Dream Come True

As the train puffed away from the small mid-western town of Butler, on a beautiful September morning, Jacquelin, a blond, blue eyed, and attractive girl about twenty years of age, looked about her for a seat. Just then a tall, dark, young man arose and said, "You may have my seat."

"Oh, thank you!" she exclaimed, "its very kind of you." But, much to her disappointment, nothing more was seen of the young man.

Jacquelin, comfortably settled in her seat, watched the wooded areas and the green-covered hills glide swiftly by and mused upon the circumstances by which she was now returning to Webster for her fourth year of college life at that Eastern institution. She recalled the slender family income and her good mother's anxiety that her daughter be not deprived of the best educational advantages. "What good fortune has been mine!" she thought. "Without the scholarship prize won in hterary competition the first year, my later college work would have been impossible. And now I must further prove that I can write."

Ambition led her on—ambition not to be denied! She pictured herself a special feature writer for the Associated Press, covering political conventions, congressional sessions, and other gatherings of national importance. And later, she hoped to offer to the literary world, out of the wisdom of her new experiences, a book that would live forever. But to realize this strong ambition, it would be necessary to study abroad. There were many students who had studied journalism, but very few were ever able to add some months of foreign study to their college diploma. "Small chance for me," thought Jacquelin, "but I shall attempt it. I shall!"

The next morning, about eight-thirty, the train stopped at the station of New Cambridge, Massachusetts, where she recognized familiar faces of friends, who flocked about her. Jacquelin and her friends exchanged experiences of the summer and prepared to extend their welcome to incoming Freshmen. Just to keep them from feeling "lonely and forlorn," the older girls planned a series of parties, teas, and receptions.

The days sped rapidly by, slipping into months, filled with study, recreations, and pleasures. The girls at Webster were happy and contented.

One Wednesday afternoon all of the girls were suddenly called to assemble in the chapel at three o'clock.

"What did we do?" asked Betty of her friend Jacquelin.

"I'm sure I don't know," remarked Jacquelin. "Who ever heard of going to chapel at such an hour?"

"I'm worried. Do you suppose we can endure the suspense until three o'clock?" inquired Betty.

At the appointed hour all the girls assembled in the chapel. When all was quiet, a man of about forty years of age stepped upon the platform and spoke thus: "I have come to you from one of the most important English Universities. Under a recently developed plan, our faculty will, each year, offer a literary prize to some aspiring young American. We take great pleasure in offering a two year scholarship in our English school to the one girl whose orginal story, presented on May first, shall be adjudged of superior merit in form and expression. The literary contest is open to Seniors in all four-year colleges. May the best story-writer win!"

Two months passed and almost every girl in the school was bus, ly writing on her story. The dormitory life settled into quiet in dustry. Girls found no time to visit each other, for, the clicking of typewriters and the scratching of feathered pens were heard at all times of day and night. "Sorry, but I haven't time," said the girls to each other. And, here and there, on different doors could be seen such signs as, "Please do not disturb," "Keep Out," "Out to Lunch." I ach girl was working diligently, hoping and praying that hers might be the prize-winning story. At last the all-important manuscripts were started on their trip across the ocean.

At first, the girls could think of nothing but their stories. Jacquelin alternately expected to carry off the scholarship prize and deeply despaired of ever doing so. Torn by hope and fear, she would finally give herself a mental shake with, "Well, I've done my very best. This story's fate will prove whether or not I can really write." Then she would go to play a round of tennis.

Came Commencement day! The campus was thronged with visitors parents, friends, underclassmen, alumni! As the shadows lengthened on an afternoon in late June, Jacquelin, carrying a happy heart, proceeded with the large class of girls, to the places reserved for graduates, in the outdoor amphitheater. She listened with avid interest to the words of congratulation and advice uttered by Dr. Ward Atherton, professor of philosophy at Columbia University. But when Miss Radcliffe, the loved and revered president of Webster, rose to present diplomas to the class leaving the college doors for ever, Jacquelin's excitement knew no bounds. Some sixty girls were called by name and received their "sheepskins." Then a group of twenty-five girls were called who. Miss Radcliffe announced, were graduating "cum laudo." Jacquelin's heart contracted. Had something happened. Then the final ten names were read. On this group Miss Radclitte conferred diplomas "cum magno laudo," and singling Jacquelin from the honor students, she said, "I take great pleasure in here announcing the name of Jacquelin - as the winner of the prize in literature offered by Oxford University, which brings to her the opportunity of foreign study for two years."

Jacquelin's joy knew no bounds. She wanted to sing—to fly—she could write! She would succeed!

Thoughts

Thoughts are food that feed the soul,
And wend their way into your mind.
They make your character strong or weak,
Influencing all you let them find.

Good clean thoughts are well worth while To anyone who lets them in. So don't admit the evil ones That lead you on to sin.

Let your thoughts grow day by day Into a pure and worthy soul That's blessed by God, when you are left On heaven's ever starlit shoal.

Famous Flyers

The board of editors hereby calls attention to five of America's celebrities of the air, whose notable contributions to the science of aviation we recognize, and whose distinguished achievements in this field we honor. These outstanding aviators very graciously responded to the editors requests for autographed pictures with those shown below.

Pilots brave, they sail the blue!
Their deeds we all admire:
Soon rich and poor, the country o'er,
To flying shall aspire.

JUST A JOB

Is it a job, or a golden chance?

The first grim post of a fine advance,
The starting place on the road which leads
To the better joys and the bigger deeds?

Do your thoughts go out to the days to be,
Can your eyes look over the drudgerv

And see in the distance the splendid flow
Of the broader life that you, too, may know?

What is your view of your circumstance:
Is it your job or a golden chance?

BE A MAN

It's a mighty good thing, while you're running life's race Just to pause, as you go, and come face to face With your conscience, and ask it a question or two. For it's right you should know what your life means to you. Have you done things worth while, have you drifted along, Have you filled it with sighs, have you filled it with song, Have you helped when you should, have you tried to do right. Have you struggled for good, or just fought for might?

Have you given your hand to some fellow in need, Have you sneered at the man who was not of your creed, Have you been open-hearted and ready to do, Have you tried to be just, have you tried to be true?

Oh, it's easy to preach and it's easy to tell Of the other chap's faults—but our own faults, ah, well! We are cowards at times, and the truth, you will find. Is a thing we dislike, for it's rather unkind.

But the Past, let it rest. Give a thought to Today.

And Tomorrow, as well, for the Time's growing gray:

Do the things that you should, do the best that you can,

Crown your life with your deeds—be a red-blooded man!

—W. Dayton Wedgefarth.

A peck of pickled pappers Peter Piper picked; Aw, shut up'

As I was going to St. Ives, I met a man with seven wives; Polygamy.

Little Jack Horner sat In the corner, Eating his Christmas pie; He put in his thumb, And pulled out a plum. And said, "Heck, I thought it was apple,"

Sing a song of sixpence, Can't; I've got laryngitis,

Twinkle, twinkle, little star Who the heck do you think you are? Up above the world so high Like a darn light bulb

How many days has my baby to play? Five days a week by the N. R. A.

A lot of things still puzzle us, That Miller's done and said, But most of all—in any class Why does his ears get red?

Jokes

Pease-porridge hot, pease-porridge cold, Pease-porridge in the pot, nine days old. Depression.

There was once a man who said, "How Shall I manage to carry my cow? For if I should ask it To get in my basket "Twould make such a terrible row"

Hickory, Dickory, dock'
The mouse run up the clock
The clock struck one—
They all went out to lunch!

Little Miss Mutfet
Sat on a tuffet
Esting her curds and whey:
Along came a spider—
And said, "Is this seat taken?"

Jack and Jill went up the hill To get a pail of water— Oh, yeah?

Goosey, Goosey, Gander, Where shall I wander? Can't pay my rent.

Hey diddle diddle,
The cat and the fiddle.
The cow jumped over the moon:
And little Audrey just laughed and laughed'

Mary, Mary, quite contrary, How does your garden grow? Better than Mr. Harrison's!

Rub-a-dub-dub, three men in a tub, Saturday night at a boarding house. Compliments
